

Moey Sam Fook

Associate Consultant / Facilitator for LRM

Moey brings with him 40 years of accounting and industrial experience of which 36 years have been within the Semiconductor sector, where he worked with three large multi-national manufacturing organizations starting with Harris Semiconductor (US). Then he joined Fico Asia (a Dutch organization) and his last posting was with Vishay Semiconductor in Malacca. A trained accountant, he held managerial positions as Senior Cost and Budget Manager, Regional Controller, and as Finance Director / Country Manager respectively in the various organizations he served.

Although having a formal finance portfolio, Moey developed a keen interest in training early on in his career and has conducted many leadership, executive development and training programs since the mid-80s, working closely with HR practitioners in various organizations he worked with. Notable certifications include being a Master Trainer of the Millennium Financial Awareness and Business Strategy Workshop, a certified DDI trainer, and on the social side, he was a founding member and principal trainer / mentor of the YEP (Young Enterprise Program) that introduced business concepts to 16-year old school children since its inception in 1989. The program was sponsored by The Malaysian American Electronics Industry sector and the Malaysian Education Ministry and to-date have exposed in excess of 10,000 children to this program. Moey was also the Regional Finance Training Coordinator for the 16 plants in Asia while still at Vishay, and supported the executive talent management programs on mentoring / coaching practices.

Moey's forte, due to his financial background and vast manufacturing experiences, has been to translate everyday transactional activities of all disciplines within the organization into a measurable financial terminology and its impact to the financial bottom line. Moey is an avid supporter of Ram Charan's Money Making Model. He has also spearheaded many high level strategic workshops using Goal Alignment toolsets under the "Hoshin" methodology and is familiar with Lean Manufacturing concepts and TQM practices.

Moey has attended numerous Franklin Covey Programs and was first exposed to The 7 Habits of Highly Effective People back in 1998 and later on attended The 4 Roles of Leadership and the Leadership: Great Leaders, Great Teams, Great Results workshop. Due to its impact upon him personally in his role as leader, he recommended this last training to senior financial managers and country controllers from 16 factories all across Vishay Asia.
